

Call for Sermons by Unitarian Universalist Women of Color

Meadville Lombard Theological School is thrilled to announce a call for sermons from Unitarian Universalist women of color.

As part of the mission of the Sankofa Special Collection to preserve and make accessible the substantial and ongoing impact of Unitarian Universalists of Color, we are collecting sermons written and delivered by clergy or lay people who identify as Unitarian Universalist and women, womanx, trans and/or female from marginalized communities of color. These sermons will be made freely available online for the general public, seminarians, and scholars through digital archive of the Sankofa Special Collection at Meadville Lombard.

Sankofa Sermon Project is featured in conjunction with a forthcoming anthology, The Presence of Black Clergywomen in Unitarian Universalism, edited by Rev. Qiyamah A. Rahman and scheduled for publication by Skinner House Books.

All topics are welcome. Please submit your best, your most outstanding, and awe-inspiring sermon to share with the world.
